

JCP's Circle of Honor and Peer Reviewers

We live in an era when science continues to advance the frontiers of medical practice. Through the gamut of medical specialties and illnesses, research progress sharpens diagnoses and focuses therapeutic interventions. The results improve quality of life for people.

Psychiatry benefits from the fruits of modern biomedical technology—and these fruits will proliferate and ripen over the coming decade. As research progresses, the resulting knowledge must be screened, collated, and brought to bear in the clinic. That's where scientific journals fit in—at the nexus of new knowledge and its distribution. The credibility of this crucial function depends in large measure on the altruistic efforts of peer reviewers, colleagues who volunteer their time and expertise to filter and focus scientific reports. Each year, The Journal of Clinical Psychiatry acknowledges those of our reviewers who go above and beyond in the number and excellence of their service. This year, we again thank those who have ascended to our “Circle of Honor.”

The editors salute and express deep gratitude to the following ladies and gentlemen. We are proud to be your colleagues.
