

JCP's Circle of Honor and Peer Reviewers

The journal review process is part of the rich history of information exchange in medicine and science. Increasingly, peer review occurs electronically, but the essence of medical journals remains the same. We are the nexus between scientific discovery and its application at the “bedside.” This flow of knowledge is vital to the practice of evidence-based medicine and to the “end users,” our patients. Regardless of the technology, the process requires an altruistic cohort of dedicated colleagues, who donate their time and talent to vet submitted papers. At JCP, we value our peer reviewers, who work diligently and anonymously to ensure we publish high-quality papers that will impact our field, advance science incrementally, and, most importantly, benefit patients. We are grateful for their dedication to this journal, especially as demands on their time grow. We sincerely thank everyone who has reviewed for us over the past year, and our deepest gratitude goes to the men and women in JCP's Circle of Honor, who have gone above and beyond in the quality and quantity of their reviews for our journal.
