Thank You to Our Peer Reviewers

Another year comes to a close, and we would like to reflect upon the hard work of JCP's peer reviewers. Without the expertise and generosity of our colleagues who accept invitations to review, we would not be able to offer the clinically relevant, high-quality articles that we strive to publish. As the science of our field becomes increasingly encouraging and complex, achieving the promise of better treatments for our patients seems closer than ever. However, with increased specialization and intricate neuroscientific advances, the need for our reviewers' expertise becomes even greater. To provide peer review is to participate in a long and generous tradition.

Special recognition is due to the members of this year's Circle of Honor, colleagues who found time in their busy schedules to review 5 or more articles over the past year. The editors of JCP thank all of our reviewers and also urge them to take the time to mentor their junior colleagues and trainees in the methods of peer reviewing. It is truly a gift to the field. To our reviewers and to all of our readers we extend warm wishes for a happy and healthy New Year.
