Time is precious and fleeting. Everyone we know struggles with time management, and the multiple ubiquitous connected “platforms” in our pockets, pocketbooks, and briefcases seem to make matters worse. Scientists, scholars, educators, and clinicians know the constraints of time well. And into their busy days and nights come editors with multiple requests to review manuscripts from colleagues. Public policy and the trust of practitioners depend on an effective peer-review system, and we editors depend on the generosity and altruism of our busy peers. They receive no compensation—only our abiding gratitude and this annual acknowledgment.

The Editors of JCP express our deep thanks and great respect to all the following men and women who have donated their time and expertise to review submitted manuscripts over the past year. Especially, we salute the latest members of our Circle of Honor, colleagues who have reviewed 7 or more articles. Your contributions make JCP the respected and trusted vehicle it has become. To you and yours, to your patients and research subjects, to all of our readers we wish a happy, healthy, and successful 2016.
